To experience what is an all-girl family like, Marianne Rockfeller, a four- (child – children – childhood) forter mother who lost a six-month baby daughter by death and has been raising her sister's four sons for about seven years, decided to swap homes with Karen Cafearo, who has four daughters.

'The four girls are as passionate about horse-riding as my boys are about football, but I was shocked by the (tidiness – mess – cleanliness). I have strict rules for my boys. They can't wear their shoes upstairs and they must tidy their rooms. The girls were so (worried – disappointed - excited) to see me, they wanted to chat and ask me questions. It was fantastic, but (exhausting – exhausted – exhaustion).
 They came to help me cook in the kitchen, they didn't want to play in the garden. I think girls need (many – much - more) attention than boys. Another shock for me was how nice the girls were to each other. The boys love each other, spend most of their free time (play – to play – playing) video games together but they (argue – hang out - agree) with each other about trival things. The thing I loved most was shopping with the girls. We had great fun. I miss that with boys.

2° Fill in the blanks with 6 words from the list below. There are 2 extra ones (3 mks) :

take part - allowance - despite - although - take care - upbringing - income - part-time

More than half of Japanese women are married. Many mothers with small children work only so they can be home when their children are not in school. The extra earned by the mother is often used to meet the cost of their children's education. Japanese mothers take the responsibility of their child's education and very seriously. The wife controls the money that comes into the house and the husband, like every child in the family, is given an Woman now have many more opportunities in the workplace therefore family life has changed. The husband tries to in the child's education, help with the house chores and spend more time with the family. these changes are occurring, the mother's role in her child's education is still of utmost importance.

3° Supply the right tense or form of the bracketed words (3 mks) :

My parents and I never really saw eye to eye about anything. I left home at 17 to study at a university in another city. Moving away from home has totally changed my opinion on lots of issues. The first couple of times I went home to visit my parents I found it really hard to deal with not (can) express my opinions as freely as I did when I was away from home.

My mum didn't (necessary) agree with my upfront attitude to life. While I was always out there trying to get people to take me and my (believe) and opinions seriously, her attitude was " why not just go with the flow ?" It was really (frustration)

I found that I really I found that I really (must) remind myself that it was okay to have the opinions that I did, but also that it was okay for my mum to have her viewpoint too. As tough as it was, once I made an effort to respect their values and opinions, getting along with my parents has been a lot (easy)
